In 2010, Swarovski enlisted multimedia artist, photographer, and director Bruno Aveillan to make a cinema spot with them that would conjure Swarovski's more than one-hundred-year heritage on the big screen. Propelled by the vision of using film as a medium for conveying Swarovski's charisma and grace and mastery of light, as well as a portrait of the spirit of crystal and beyond, the team ventured to Turkey, traveling from İstanbul to a salt lake outside of Ankara. There, they began filming what was to become a tale of brilliance and movement. The result is a beautiful, powerful, and unique cinematic work that will amaze and delight cinema audiences. It is an experience you should not miss out on...

From the Diary of Mu .com:

Tracey Emin DIARY: THE IMAGINARY, THE SYMBOLIC, AND THE REAL

It's hard to fit in little words the massive euphoria we experienced and shared that night with Tracey Emin. On the 15th of September 2011, Diary of Mu was invited to a very special opening that gives away a bright future for İstanbul's fresh creative character. İstanbul '74 and Lehmann Maupin Gallery merged for one night only for the sake of this new era where İstanbul and New York finally shake hands. Core of the night, Tracey Emin, referred with a raised glass to the things that are about to come, the things that are about to change. She shared beauty with us. She shared herself under her striking neon work saying, "It doesn't matter- my friend it does not matter, to cry is beautiful".
